HISTORICAL SKETCH
1817-1917

Frederick W. Hamilton, D.D., LL.D.

The one hundred year's life of Boston Council, if properly treated with due notice of the eminent Masons whose names adorn its rolls, would furnish material for a book of respectable dimensions. In the time at my disposal, I can only trace the history briefly with notice of the incidents of greatest historic interest.

Prior to 1817 the Council degrees had been developed as appendant or side degrees in Freemasonry. They appear to have been related at once to the Scottish Rite system of degrees and also to the Royal Arch Chapters. There seems no question that the degrees were in the first place outgrowths of the Scottish Rite, as is shown in their character and also by the way in which they were given. Originally they were not given in bodies organized for that purpose, but the conferring of the degrees upon a candidate carried with it the right to confer them upon others. In the early years of the nineteenth century we find a number of men who were very busy about the conferring of these degrees, taking for their own use the fees obtained therefor. This had been a common practice among those who had received the highest degrees in the Scottish Rite and at that time would cause no unfavorable comment.

The relation to the Royal Arch Chapter comes from the close relation between the Council degrees and the third and seventh degrees in the York Rite system. For this reason only Royal Arch Masons were eligible to receive the Council degrees. Until the law of the Cryptic Rite had been developed, all questions were decided by the application of Chapter Law: for example, we find in the early records of Boston Council that a question as to the competency of a small number present at a certain meeting to do business was settled by reference to the fundamental Chapter law which required the presence of nine to open a Royal Arch Chapter.

Through this method of individual communication a considerable number of distinguished Masons interested in the Art became possessed of the degrees. It was evident that this irresponsible scattering of the degrees could not properly continue and the second decade of the nineteenth century saw the organization of bodies for the regular carrying on of this work. One of the earliest, though not the first, of the bodies to be thus formed was Boston Council. The prime movers in the matter were three, Benjamin Gleason, Aaron Bean, and Joseph Jenkins.

I quote now from the introduction to the first volume of the records of Boston Council. "During the several preceding years many respectable Royal Arch Masons having previously obtained the honorary degrees of Royal Master, etc. and in consequence having cultivated a more immediate and intellectual friendship in the concerns of the craft proposed at some future day the establishment of this select order in a regular Council with its usual forms, regalia, etc. as a desideratum especially in relation to (though independent of) the third and seventh degrees in Masonry. It was otherwise desirable, as many Councils were formed and forming in the several sister states throughout the Union: that in the metropolis of New England a similar association should exist. Boston being the grand point within the line and circle of our Masonic communication and the degree of Royal Master being a grade of high reputation, with numerous moral points and traditional interests worthy of a connection in the fellowship of the Lodges, Chapters, and Encampments, it was considered too important to be neglected, or informally and indiscriminately conferred: therefore, after serious consultation on the best ways and means to make the Society respectable and benefit the fraternity, Companions Benjamin Gleason, Aaron Bean and Joseph Jenkins proposed and effected a regular convention of their fellow associates of this ineffable order at the Masonic Hall in the Exchange Coffee House, Boston, July 20, 1817."

At this meeting were present, Henry Fowle, Benjamin Gleason, Robert Lash, Daniel L. Gibbens, Joseph Jenkins, Aaron Bean, John R. Bradford, Alexander Brown, and John J. Loring. These Companions met, discussed and adopted a preamble, and effected an organization. Application was made to Columbia Council of New York, for a Charter, and the Charter was in due time received.

Gleason and Fowle were immediately made honorary members and they were also made a nominating Committee to present a list of officers. They nominated the following, who were immediately elected to their respective positions: Benjamin Gleason, Most Illustrious Master; Joseph Jenkins, Illustrious Master; Paul Dean, Laureat; Robert Lash, Master of the Exchequer; Daniel L. Gibbens, Recorder; William Barry, Master of the Guards; John R. Bradford, Sentinel. Dean and Barry were not present, but the Committee seems to have been assured of their co-operation. It was voted also to add to their number the following Companions, who should be regarded as original members of the Council, in addition to Dean and Barry: Zachariah G. Whitman, Eleazer G. House, Samuel Davis, Seth Johnson, Nathaniel Hammond, Calvin Howe, and Elisha Wheeler, making the entire number regarded as original members 18. Apparently all of these had previously received the degrees. It would be interesting to know where they got them, but upon that point, unfortunately, we have no information.

They were a very notable body of Masons, particularly those who were present at the first meeting. It will be worth while to note briefly their particular Masonic distinctions so that we may know what manner of men they were. As we shall see, the men of the second group were somewhat less distinguished than those of the first, but doubtless were men noted for their personal qualities and their interest in Masonry.

Henry Fowle, 1766-1837, was Senior Grand Warden of the Grand Lodge in 1809. He was a delegate from St. Andrew's Chapter to the Convention forming the General Grand Royal Arch Chapter and was for many years an officer and member of the General Grand Encampment and was founder of Boston Commandery.

Benjamin Gleason, 1777-1847, was the first grand Lecturer of the Grand Lodge of Massachusetts and otherwise prominent in Masonry.

Robert Lash, 1799-1864, was Senior Grand Warden of the Grand Lodge in 1844.

Daniel L. Gibbens, 1786-1853, was Grand High Priest in 1826, 1827, and 1828.

Aaron Bean, 1779-1820, died in office as Worshipful Master of Columbian Lodge.

Joseph Jenkins, 1781-1851, was Grand Master of Masons in Massachusetts in 1830, 1831, and 1832.

John R. Bradford, 1790-1865 was Junior Grand Warden of the Grand Lodge in 1846, 1847, and 1848, and was Grand Master of the Grand Encampment, as it was then called, of Massachusetts and Rhode Island, in 1848 and 1849.

Of Alexander Brown we know nothing certain. He was probably a member of St. John's Lodge of Newburyport. I am led to this conclusion by the fact that there was an Alexander Brown who was a member of that Lodge at that time and the further fact that one of the first things done by Boston Council was the founding of a Council at Salem, showing some center of interest in that part of the state.

John J. Loring, 1779-1856, was Corresponding Grand Secretary of the Grand Lodge of Massachusetts from 1824 to 1827, Grand Treasurer from 1827 to 1848, and Senior Grand Warden in 1849. He was Recorder of the General Grand Encampment in 1816.

Paul Dean, 1782-1860, was the holder of many important Masonic offices among which may be mentioned that of Grand High Priest of the General Grand Chapter, which office he held for nine years, Prelate of the General Grand Encampment, which office he held for seven years, and Grand Master of Masons in Massachusetts in 1838, 1839, and 1840.

William Barry, 1775-1855, was Worshipful Master of Mt. Lebanon Lodge in 1817. This seems, by the way, to have been Brother Barry's great year for in it he was not only Worshipful Master of his Lodge but one of the founders of Boston Council and also one of the founders of the historic Second Society of Universalists in Boston.

Zachariah G. Whitman, 1789-1840, was Worshipful Master of The Massachusetts Lodge in 1819 and 1820.

Eleazer G. House, 1790-1846 +, was Worshipful Master of The Massachusetts Lodge in 1816.

Samuel Davis appears to have taken his degrees in 1808 in Columbian Lodge but never to have joined that Lodge. He joined Mt. Lebanon Lodge in 1812 and dimitted in 1826. The dates of his birth and death are not known.

Of Seth Johnson we know nothing excepting that he was Raised in the Lodge of St. Andrew in 1797.

Of Nathaniel Hammond we know little excepting that he became a member of the Lodge of St. Andrew in 1807 and St. Andrew's Chapter in 1815.

Our only record of Calvin House is that he became a member of Columbian Lodge in 1807.

Of Elisha Wheeler we know only that he was received into the Lodge of St. Andrew in 1811.

This brief notice of the founders shows that they numbered among them a surprisingly large number, considering the small membership, of the most distinguished Masons of this neighborhood. They were a strong and remarkable body of men and it is certainly an honor to be their Masonic descendants.

The original by-laws contained an article which throws an interesting light on the condition of the Cryptic Rite at this time. It is as follows:

> "ARTICLE VI. No member shall confer the degrees within twenty miles of Boston without the consent of the Council under sanction of the signatures of the two senior officers with the Seal of Attestation of the Recorder."

It is quite evident that these brethren had no intention of resigning entirely their right of conferring the degrees as individuals while regularizing the degrees in and about Boston.

It was further provided that the meetings should be quarterly, on the last Tuesdays of January, April, July, and October. The membership fee was fixed at four shekels of silver and the fee for the degrees at six shekels of silver. Certainly these were modest fees, even if we consider the greater purchasing power of money at that period.

The first meeting on July 20, 1817 was kept alive by successive adjournments and subsequent sessions were held on July 27, July 31, September 30, and October 11 when the meeting was finally closed. The first regular meeting under the By-Laws was held January 27, 1818.

At a special meeting held May 15, 1818, Companion Gleason was empowered to confer the degree of Royal Master on "a number of Companions in Salem." A Committee recommended at this meeting, "that it is expedient to confer and cultivate in this Council the degrees of Royal Master, Super-Excellent Master, Select Master of 27, and Knight of the Round Table. The degrees are named in this order, but at first only the Royal degree was conferred. The degrees of Select Master of 27 and Super-Excellent Master were conferred for the first time on May 19, 1819. It is recorded that the degree of Knight of the Round Table was conferred on January 25, 1820. This appears to be the only time the degree was conferred as I can find no other mention of it in the records of the Council. For many years it was the custom of Boston Council to confer the Select Master of 27, or Select Master as it soon came to be called, first, the Royal Master second, and the Super-Excellent Master third.

Companion Gleason acted promptly under the authority conferred upon him and reported on May 27 that he had conferred the Royal degree on three Companions in Salem and the Council voted to recommend and approve the establishment of a Council in Salem. This was accordingly done and the three Companions who had received the degrees apparently conferred them upon the candidates.

The record book contains an entry that "on Tuesday evening, November 3, 1818, the Exchange Coffee House in Boston, where was the elegant Masonic Hall recently finished with much taste and with great expense and in which the Boston Council of Royal Masters held their meetings, was entirely destroyed by fire." Apparently the Council did not suffer materially as it appears at this time to have had no regalia or property. We have no information as to the fate of the Charter. The records appear to have existed only in the shape of notes.

The January meeting of the Council following the fire was held in Masonic Hall, Ann Street, which appears to have been thereafter the regular meeting place of the Council.

As was often the case with the early Masonic organizations, the regular records of the meetings did not begin until some time after the organization of the body. The first regular record of a meeting is dated October 26, 1819. From that time on the minutes are regularly kept. The records of the previous meetings appear to have been written in at this time from memoranda. The essential facts, however, are apparently all preserved, even to the names of those in attendance at the several meetings which had been held. A curious omission occurs, however, in the case of William Barry. He is not recorded as being present at the first meeting. He was, however, in the list of officers elected at that meeting, as was Paul Deal who was also absent. Barry's name does not appear in the list of brethren who were voted to be considered original members, although Dean's name does so appear. It is evident, however, that Barry was considered an original member as his name occurs constantly thereafter. A new Constitution and By-Laws, much more elaborate than the first set, were adopted at this October meeting in 1819.

It was not long before difficulties began to appear which are by no means to be wondered at. The membership of the Council, as we have seen, was very small. The fees were likewise small and there were necessary expenses although the Council seems to have been run very economically. We get a hint of financial difficulty in the April meeting of 1821 when a Committee was appointed which reported on October 15, going over the entire accounts of the Council from the beginning. It appeared that the receipts for the entire period had amounted to $334.00 and the expenses had amounted to $435.70 leaving a deficit of $101.70. This was not a large balance sheet for four years of work, but the condition which it disclosed was alarming. The fees had been fixed by the Constitution of 1819 at $3.00 for each degree, $4.00 for membership, and $1.00 per year for dues, evidently insufficient to meet the conditions. The Treasurer was authorized to borrow enough money on a demand note to meet the deficit. How in the world they ever expected him to meet the note does not appear. Apparently the matter was taken care of by the Companions as we not only hear no more about this difficulty but on February 22, 1823, we find the Council indulging in a celebration which must have been attended with considerable expense.

This was nothing less than a public installation. Evidently the Companions were very enthusiastic about it, if we may judge by the glowing language used by Companion Benjamin Huntington, the Recorder, in his description. The Companions were present in full force accompanied by their ladies. Boston Encampment of Knights Templars was present as a body. The Encampment attended in full regalia and was received with elaborate ceremony. Presumably the guests were also accompanied by ladies. In addition to the reception of the Knights Templars and the public installation there was at least one address which seems to have stirred the hearts of the Companions, and an elaborate concert. Nothing is said about any collation.

This is the only record of any open meeting of the Council of any sort for many, many years. At the previous annual meeting, whereat were elected the officers installed on this occasion, nothing was said about the old indebtedness, but it was reported that the Council owed the Treasurer $42.33. It appears to have been his accommodating habit to pay all the bills as they came in, using his own money when the Council did not have enough. Again he was authorized to borrow $100.00 and again we hear no more about financial difficulties until the Anti-Masonic Persecution affected all of our bodies in this regard. It is probable that either the Treasurer or some other one or more of the Companions was taking care of the finances of the infant body, for in spite of the low fees and the comparatively small number of candidates, regalia, jewels, etc. had been bought, the affairs of the Council had been adequately conducted, and some how or another its deficits had been met.

Indeed the Council seems to have been managed as a family affair wherein all matters were discussed and dealt with in a delightfully informal and fraternal way. It was not until April 25, 1826, that it was voted that thereafter Committees of Inquiry should be appointed on applications. Up to that time the candidates seemed to have been well known to all the members and discussed freely in open Council.

Hitherto the Councils had been independent. Organized voluntarily or under the patronage of the older Councils, there was no unifying or governing body. At the January meeting in 1826 a communication was read from Springfield Council inviting the several Councils in the State to attend a meeting to be held at Brimfield, February 8, to consider the question of forming a Grand Council. Boston Council heard the proposition favorably and appointed Paul Dean and William J. Whipple delegates. The Conference met in due time. There were present representatives of Boston Council: Adoniram, of Medfield; Springfield, of Springfield; Brimfield, of Brimfield; Washington, of Greenwich; and Hiram, of Sutton; Salem, of Salem; Newburyport, of Newburyport; Princeton, of Princeton, and Warren, of Sheffield were not represented. Dean was called to preside over the deliberations of the Convention which appear to have been fairly harmonious. Grand Constitutions were considered and it was voted to call a conference to act upon them at Boston on the 15th of the following June. The conference met at the appointed time, there being present representatives of Boston, Adoniram, Brimfield, Hiram, Salem, and Springfield Councils. Newburyport, Princeton, Warren, and Washington Councils were not represented. It will be noted that Salem which was not represented in the first conference was represented in this one, and that Washington which was represented in the first conference was now absent, otherwise the representation of Councils was unchanged.

This conference adopted the Constitutions, organized the Grand Council and proceeded to elect the following officers: Abraham A. Dame, Most Illustrious Grand Master; George Bliss, Jr., Right Illustrious Deputy Grand Master; Edward A. Raymond, Illustrious Grand Conductor; Paul Dean, Grand Chaplain; Henry Brown, Grand Master of the Exchequer; Thomas Payson, Grand Recorder; Walton Felch, Grand Captain of the Guards; Charles Onion, Grand Steward; William Knapp, Grand Sentinel. Of these Dame, Raymond, Dean, Payson, and Knapp were members of Boston Council. Boston Council took out a Charter from the Grand Council promptly upon its organization.

The organization of the Grand Council did not take place at an auspicious time. The year 1825 marks the beginning of the Anti-Masonic Persecution which sent Masonry into a partial eclipse for nearly twenty years. The records of the Grand Council show no meetings from December 12, 1827, to March 1, 1847, and regular meetings do not seem to have been resumed until December, 1853.

Boston Council suffered with the rest, although it did not feel the effects in exactly the manner or at exactly the time which might be expected. For a considerable period meetings, which for some time had been monthly instead of quarterly, were held regularly, but with very small attendance. The records often show only five, six, or seven present. Many dimits were taken out and there was very little work, long periods passing without any candidates either for the degrees or for membership. Financial difficulties naturally appeared under these circumstances, but at the annual meeting in February, 1833, the Council appeared to be solvent. In October, 1834, the Council voted to stand closed until the annual meeting in January, 1835. In 1835, 1836, and 1837 only the annual meetings were held. The annual meeting of 1838 was held in January and the Council met in February to receive into membership Winslow Lewis, afterwards Grand Master of Masons in Massachusetts, and Daniel Harwood, after which the Council adjourned to September. Meetings were held in September and October, but it was then voted to stand closed until the annual meeting in January, 1839. A Committee was appointed to consider the question of the dissolution of the Council, but the report is not recorded. Meetings were now being held with a fair degree of regularity.

At the February meeting of 1840 we meet the name of Companion Gleason for the last time. Although Companion Gleason had been the father of the Council and for a short time a most assiduous parent, he does not appear to have maintained his interest. He never affixed his signature to the Constitution of 1819, although an effort appears to have been made to get the signatures of the original members. Whether on account of absence from Boston (and we know that he was much absent for a considerable number of years) or for some other reason, we find that his attendance after the reorganization of 1819 was only occasional. For the next four years or so he appears to have been present once or twice a year. After that his name disappears from the records. As he had been made an honorary member there is no record of his being dimitted or suspended. It appears, however, that in 1839 Companion Gleason went to Albany, New York, and conferred the Council degrees upon some brethren whom he there met. It seems to have been hard for him to realize that the conditions which prevailed when he took his degrees and when Boston Council compelled its members to forego the right of conferring them within twenty miles of Boston without the sanction of the Council, had been entirely altered by the creation of Grand Councils. His procedure in going into the jurisdiction of the Grand Council of New York and there conferring degrees and organizing a Council was as irregular as anything pretending to be Masonic well could be. The Albany brethren appear to have acted in good faith, but they soon entertained misgivings as to the soundness of their position and wrote to Boston Council to ask as to Gleason's authority, their own position, and what they ought to do. The report of the Committee, which was adopted by Boston Council, is a very sound Masonic document. It informs the Albany brethren that Gleason was entirely outside his authority, that their standing is irregular, and that they should at once throw themselves on the mercy of the Grand Council of New York. The report also carries a rather severe censure of Companion Gleason. It is hard to realize that so irregular a proceeding could have been engaged upon by so well instructed a Mason as Companion Gleason. It is perhaps most charitable to conclude that age was making inroads upon his powers and obscuring his judgment.

At the same meeting at which Companion Gleason was censured it was voted to suspend quarterages until otherwise ordered. At the next meeting, in March, it was voted to remit all arrears of dues. At the annual meeting in January, 1841, Charles W. Moore, whose name will at once be recognized as one of the brightest in the annals of Massachusetts Masonry, was elected Most Illustrious Grand Master, as the presiding officer of Boston Council continued to be called. Work was now beginning to come in, quarterages were revived in 1842, and the brethren seem to have had hope that they would after all be able to weather the storm. The strain, however, had been too severe. In September, 1842, it was voted "that the Recorder give notice to the Trustees of the Temple that necessity has compelled a suspension of the meetings of the Council and that we can no longer pay rent." It was also voted that the jewels and regalia be placed in charge of the Most Illustrious Grand Master.

It seems particularly tragic that after making so long and so brave a struggle Boston Council should have been compelled to suspend just at the time when Freemasonry in general was beginning to revive. The Grand Constitutions of the Grand Lodge were revised in 1843, new Lodges began to be chartered, old Lodges which had surrendered their Charters began to receive them back again, and the revival of Masonry fairly began. At first sight it seems strange that at this time above all others Boston Council should be obliged to suspend. The reason may be found in the fact that the Council, being dependent for its material not only upon the symbolic Lodges but upon the Royal Arch Chapters as well, could not immediately share in the revival of Masonry. Its members when the difficulty began were for the most part Masons of the type which could be relied upon to stand firm. To a considerable extent they did so, but they stood on an exposed firing line with heavy casualties and practically no reinforcements. Of those who had been made Masons previous to 1825 few or none cared to progress in Masonry during this period of trouble. From 1825 to 1843 there were practically no Masons made in this jurisdiction. Before the revival could reach the Council it was necessary that new Masons should be made and should not only take the Lodge and Chapter degrees but should attain a Masonic standing and maturity which would commend them to such a body as Boston Council. For these reasons the strain upon the Council was at its greatest at the moment when relief began to be felt in the Lodges. The faithful few had borne the burden as long as they could. Seeing no immediate relief in sight they laid it down, but with a firm and steadfast resolve to take it up again at the earliest opportunity.

The Council remained dormant for eleven years. November 22, 1853, Companion Moore, to whom the Most Illustrious Grand Master had returned the Charter, summoned the Companions and the Council was revived.

The Companions had evidently taken care to assure themselves as to the prospect of further prosperity for the Council. At its first meeting the names of four candidates for the degrees were presented and those of ten candidates for membership.

Companion Moore served only long enough to resume the activities of the Council. At a meeting held November 29, 1853, Rev. Companion Stephen Lovell was elected Master. Companion Lovell was an earnest and active worker and under him the Council prospered greatly. He was much loved by his Companions, as is shown not only by their expressions of regret when he died in office in September, 1858, but also by the interest which they showed in the final disposal of his remains and in the welfare of his widow. A vote passed by the Council in January, 1855, is not only interesting for its evidence of the interest which the Companions had in their Master's comfort but also for the light it throws on the customs of the good city of Boston two generations ago. It runs as follows: "Whenever the duties of the presiding officer of this Council shall detain him to an hour beyond that of the departure of the last onmibus to South Boston, a coach shall be furnished him at the expense of the Council, and the Master of the Exchequer is hereby authorized to the same."

A year after the revival, in November, 1854, the Treasurer's accounts showed all bills paid and a balance of $134.62. In March, 1855, eighteen of the older members were made honorary members. This is at once an evidence of the prosperity of the Council and of its appreciation of the services of those who had done so much to keep Masonry alive during the years of persecution. The prosperity of the Council is further attested by the fact that the balance in the hands of the treasurer at the November meeting was $491.52.

Evidently the action of the Council in 1826, previously referred to, to provide for Committees of Examination on the candidates, had not been lived up to, for in 1859 the By-Laws were amended providing for the appointment of such Committees thereafter.

At the meeting of November 10, 1859, a committee was appointed to provide a collation for the members at the next regular meeting of the Council. This is the first notice of anything of the sort which occurs in the records. Apparently up to this time our Companions had been content without adding the pleasures of table to the pleasures of Masonic work and social intercourse.

But new trials were awaiting. April 25, 1861, the Council met in the midst of the first excitement of the Civil War. At that meeting it was voted, "That a committee of five be appointed with full powers whose duty it shall be to ascertain the names of those members of this Council who may be or have been called to enlist in the service of their country for the protection of our glorious Flag, and that said committee visit the families of such as have any and see their wants are plentifully supplied during the absence of their protector." What this Committee did does not appear on the records, but I doubt not that it attended to its duties and that such as needed its ministrations were well provided for.

The Civil War days were a period of great Masonic activity in which Boston Council shared. The annual report of 1862 showed a membership of 180.

On the night of April 5, 1864, came the great disaster of the burning of the Winthrop House, in which so much that was of inestimable value to Freemasonry was destroyed. Boston Council did not lose its records, but it did lose its regalia and other property, including its charter. From that time on it held its meetings at Freemasons' Hall, No. 10 Summer Street, until the erection of the new temple at the corner of Tremont and Boylston Streets. The blow, however, did not cripple the Council. The annual report rendered at the September meeting in 1865 showed a membership of 238, while the Treasurer's report showed that the regalia had been replaced at a cost of $681.80, there was a balance in the Treasury of $262.87, and no liabilities.

The next year, on January 25, 1866, appears the first record of an official visitation by a representative of the Grand Council. This visit was made by the Most Illustrious Grand Master in person, and from that time on such visitations have been made regularly and have been looked forward to with great pleasure by the members of the Council, and, we hope, by the visiting officers and their official suites.

In September of the same year we find the beginnings of the invested funds of the Council. The record is

ROYAL MASTERS

Title Page of first Book of Records of Boston Council of R. and S. Masters interesting not only as showing the beginning of our permanent fund, but as illustrating the business conditions of that time. The Council paid $1000 for 25 shares of stock of the Somerville Horse Railroad Company. The par value of the shares was $50.00 and interest was guaranteed at 6%, the price paid being $40.00 per share, or 80%. The investment appears to have been a good one as the records show that the interest was regularly paid and the shares soon advanced to par. 6%, by the way, was a moderate rate of interest at that time.

For many years Thomas Waterman had been Recorder of the Council, but he was now advancing in years, and it was evident that his duties were weighing upon him. Although the records regularly appear in full in many cases they are not signed. At the November meeting of 1866 the records are without signature and are in a new handwriting. At the December meeting the same handwriting appears and the records are signed "F. A. Pierce, Assistant Recorder." This arrangement continued until the annual meeting in 1869 when Thomas Waterman closed his long service of 38 years as Recorder and Companion Pierce succeeded him.

At the meeting held October 26, 1871, it was voted, "to present suitable testimonials to all past Masters of the Council who are now members." This begins the delightful custom of presenting Past Master's jewels to our retiring presiding officers.

In 1872, at the December meeting, the presiding officer is called Thrice Illustrious Master, although there is no record of a vote authorizing the change. Up to this time the presiding officer of Boston Council continued to be called Most Illustrious. This action was probably taken on account of the measures which were then on foot to organize a General Grand Council. This movement was inaugurated in 1871 under the leadership of Josiah H. Drummond, of Maine. A convention was called to meet June 12, 1872 to consider the regulation:

1. Of the nomenclature of the rite.
2. The number and order of degrees.
3. The work and ritual.

Meetings were held in June, 1872, and again in June, 1873, at which action was taken upon the matters before the Convention. The measures proposed were not at first acceptable to Masssachusetts. Up to this time the degrees had been conferred in the order of Select, Royal, and Super-Excellent. The recommendations of the Convention not only called for a different order of the degrees, but for extensive alterations in the ritual. Massachusetts at first refused to accede to the proposed changes, but finally agreed to accept them. Mississippi favored the abandonment of the Cryptic Rite as such and the turning over of the Cryptic degrees to the Royal Arch Chapter, thus placing the Council work under the jurisdiction of the General Grand Chapter. This plan, however, was defeated and a Constitution for a General Grand Council adopted, to become effective when ratified by nine Grand Councils. The ratifications came slowly and it was not until March 1, 1881 that proclamation was made that the Constitutional number of Grand Councils had ratified the Constitutions and that the General Grand Council was now fully constituted.

Unfortunately the Grand Councils have not yet all come into the general organization. There are now 29 Grand Councils in the General Grand Council. Eight Grand Councils, namely, Rhode Island, Connecticut, Pennyslvania, New Jersey, Illinois, Michigan, Wisconsin, and Texas still retain their independence. Eleven states have no Grand Councils, such Councils as exist therein being directly subordinate to the General Grand Council.

But few more events remain to be recorded in completing the development of our Council into its present condition. December 28, 1876, titles of all the officers in line appear as we now know them. For some years yet the Council retained the system so long followed by the Blue Lodges of separating the degrees from membership in the body. Recipients of the degrees were required to pass a ballot and pay an additional fee before being permitted to sign the By-Laws. On February 28, 1889, the By-Laws were amended so that recipients of the degrees might become members without ballot, but upon payment of $5.00. On January 26, 1893, the last remnant of this separation was removed by further amendment to the By-Laws which raised the fee to $30.00 and entitled the recipients to all the degrees and to membership on signing the By-Laws. With this amendment so much of the history of Boston Council as needs record in a paper of this sort is completed. The prosperity which began in 1853 has continued without serious interruption. The Council has come into full life as we know it today. There were to be hard places in the road, obstacles to be surmounted, difficulties to overcome, but the future is never again seriously endangered. Financially stable, strong in numbers, and united in spirit, Boston Council today has come into the full measure of its power and faces the second century of its existence with every prospect of continued usefulness and assured prosperity.

BOSTON COUNCIL CENTENNIAL

1817 - 1917

One hundred years have floated by
Since Boston Council saw the light,
Its secrets in the ages lie,
Its future looms with promise bright.

A century is but a day
Within the mighty span of years,
Before a milestone fades away
Behold another quick appears.

Thus lives are made, and lives pass out,
Thus names are carved, and deeds are done,
Ears scarce receive the triumph shout
Till eyes behold the silent one.

Come faithful servants, souls sublime,
Ye Hirams of the Shadow Land!
Tread down the golden steps of time
And join today our festive band.

The stream of time is speeding fast,
Beside its waters let us meet,
To build upon the golden past
And plan to make the work complete.

Around the Altar of our God,
With eyes of faith fixed up above,
We gather on this sacred sod,
Renew our vow and pledge our love.

Thou, God of Ages! crown our task,
Hearken unto Thy servant's prayer,
Our Council bless, we humbly ask,
And keep her in Thy loving care.

W. T. H. SALTER.
